

This comment is in reference to weakening the Indiana No-Call law. I completely support this law. I do not want these businesses calling my home harassing me to buy their services/products. The theory of established business relationship is ridiculous, on that premise, I know how to find them if I want their service. I work a strange shift, as I am a police officer. I do not want these people invading my home with their phone calls. As for free speech, they can speak anytime they wish, however I feel it is a violation of my freedom to say that they can call me about it. Their freedom of speech does not entail forcing me to listen to it. I do not want this law weakened. Its bad enough that the newspapers can call and try to sell their products. If I want or need something badly enough, I can find it, I do not need harassing phone sales calls. As for the members of the CBA, if I have any business with this organization, I will certainly take whatever steps necessary to cease such relationship and suggest to all of my acquaintances that they do the same. Thank you.
